

Energizing Alaska

The BP Energy Center serves Alaska's nonprofit and education organizations.

We also provide Alaskans with information about the energy industry in our state. The goal is to stimulate innovation and leadership by providing the community with an environment for learning and collaboration.

Interactive displays throughout the building highlight different aspects of the industry. Teachers are welcome to use the displays and guest lecturers are also available to speak to students. Everyone is welcome to view the building and exhibits from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

BP Energy Center

Energizing Alaska's nonprofit and education organizations

Serving Alaskans

The BP Energy Center offers free meeting rooms for the community, along with audio/visual equipment.

It is available for the following users:

- Community-based nonprofits
- Education organizations
- Teachers and students (other than regularly scheduled classes)
- Professional associations
- Faith-based groups for community service or education use
- Nonpartisan organizations promoting participation in the political process

The BP Energy Center cannot be used for any activity that advances a particular religious doctrine or for any partisan political activity. It is also not available for business use.

An official tax identification number will be needed to reserve a room.

BP Alaska reserves the right to refuse groups/organizations for any reason, including a conflict in scheduling.

“The BP Energy Center is a wonderful community resource. The money saved on facility rental helps us focus more of our resources on our mission to serve our membership and promote philanthropy. Thank you for this valuable gift to the community.”

- Beth Johnson
Program Chair
Association of Fundraising Professionals, Alaska Chapter
