4. Recent developments – BP Group's transition to an integrated energy company

On 7 February 2023, BP provided an update on its transition to an integrated energy company.

BP aims to increase investment in its transition growth engines (TGEs) bioenergy, convenience, EV charging, hydrogen and renewables and power by up to US$1 billion a year on average or up to a cumulative additional US$8 billion from 2023 until 2030. BP's investment in its TGEs is expected to reach between US$7 and US$9 billion a year in 2030 as a result and its cumulative investment for the period of 2023 to 2030 is expected to reach approximately US$55 to US$65 billion. BP's investment in TGEs is expected to be between US$6 and US$8 billion in 2025.

BP also aims to increase investment into high-quality oil and gas projects by an average of up to US$1 billion a year or up to a cumulative additional US$8 billion from 2023 until 2030.

As a result of these changes, BP anticipates that the BP Group's oil and gas production will be around 2.3 million barrels of oil equivalent a day in 2025 and aims for it to be around 2.0 million barrels of oil equivalent a day in 2030. The projected 2030 production would be approximately 25 per cent. lower than the BP Group's production in 2019, excluding production from Rosneft, compared to the BP Group's previous expectation of a reduction of around 40 per cent. BP is correspondingly aiming for a fall of 20 per cent. to 30 per cent. in emissions from the carbon in its oil and gas production in 2030 compared to a 2019 baseline. This is lower than its previous aim of 35 per cent. to 40 per cent.
